Curious Eastern Weapons

The United States Consul at Amoy, China, has made a very curious collection of Chinese and Japanese weapons.

The handsomest of all is a general's saber, about four and a half feet long, slightly Japanese in style, with an edge like a razor and a point that would extort admiration from an Italian bandit. Unlike our own, the thickest part of the blade is the center. This gives great weight to the weapon, joined to the appearance of great lightness. The scabbard is made of hard, tough wood, lacquered to represent black iron incrusted with mother-of-pearl. The hilt is of black iron molded in the form of a full-blown rose, the petals of which have been drilled with small holes and these filled with bright brass KeystoneWatch Case Co.,

The most curious of the lot is the so called warrier's two-bladed sword from Ho-Nan. It is only about two feet long and in the SHEPP'S Silver and scabbard looks very like the sword bayonet of our own army. The scabbard is plain, but very neat and covered with white shagreen (or shark skin) and trimmed with brass mountings. When you draw it the blade divides into two, each a facsimile of the other, double edged and spear-pointed. The twin blades have a remarkable decoration made by drilling seven holes about an inch and a half in diameter and put in a zigzag line from hilt to point. These are filled with pure copper, which is ground down to a smooth surface flush with the steel and polished to a mirrow-like brightness. These seven stars, as they are called, are found in nearly all the martial weapons of Ho-Nan, and are relics of the old astrologic faith that still prevails in many parts of China. Its hold is so strong that if the copper falls out of one of the sword holes it is accepted as a sure precursor of death; and the luckless wielder of the blade usually commits suicide to escape further trouble The short stabbing daggers, which find favor chiefly with pirates and revolutionists, form a strong contrast with the weapons described. One looks like a queerly made ace of spades fastened into a wire-bound handle. To increase the artistic weighs over three pounds. If set with a long handle it can be used as an ax. The most dreadful looking weapon of all is the executioner's sword. used by the late headsman of Amov. It is of Manchoorian type, being long, almost straight, very heavy and keenly edged. It is used with one hand and is shaped and wound so as to give the executioner a powerful hold upon his weapon. Upon the blade near the hilt are Chinese characters recording the tragic events in which it has taken part. It records no less than 193 human lives which it has taken out of this world. A spear captured by the French from the Black Flags in Tonquin is eight feet long. The shaft is of ironwood, round, polished, and varnished and reinforced here and there by wrappings of fine copper wire, and at the upper hand is incrusted the distance of a foot with mother of pearl. The end is ferrul-Mr. Watts—If that isn't just like a woman. Buttoning her shoes with a hair-pin.

man at fifty yards. In the Franco-Tonquin war a powerful Chinese foot soldier drove his weapon entirely through two French infantrymen. It is claimed that the finer and handsomer spears are not of Chinese workmanship, but are made by Japanese, Korean, Anamite and Malayan ironsmiths.

Of halberds there is a great variety, ranging from the simple lochaber ax and poleax to the cumbrous and complicated masses of metal that were so common at the close of the age of chivalry. The oddest specimen was one which, instead of the respect to treatment of the specimen was one which, instead of the specimen was for consultation.

Nature's Surest Ally If nature did not struggle against disease, even in weakly constitutions, swift indeed would be the course of a malayd to its fatal termination. While nature thus struggles let us, lest worse be-fall us, aid her efforts with judicious medicinal help. Experience must be our guide in battles with disease, and that "lamp to our feet" indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe, tried and with bile, if the blood be effected with bile, if the bowels and atomach are inactive, if the kidneys fail to expel impurities of which they are the natural outlet, a course of the Bitters is the surest reliance of the sufferer, one, moreover, that is sanctioned by professional indorsement and use for nearly half a century.
